What to Do with Tramps.

From the New York Graphic.

This is the only enlightened country on earth where able-bodied tramps are permitted to straggle over the land living on the savings of the industrious. In other outside the other day in the presence of a number of medical men and reporters. About a thousand patients of a mild type having been assembled in a hall, a fashionable young lady of a charitable mind sat down at a piano and rendered a number of operatic pieces in the prevailing style. The result, surprising to relate, was that the unfortunate patients of a mild type also and taking care of public property. The result, surprising to relate, was that the unfortunate patients of a mild type speedily became raving mad, and pursued the scientific investigators, the innocent ryporters, and the charitable young lady off from the stage and around the room until the attendants came to the rescue.

YOUTHFUL REPORTS. What a Little Boy and Girl Heard eports of a sermon by Mr. Barnitz yeserday, written out by two children, a boy and girl, sged respectively, 10 and 11 years, who attended service at his Church.

THE BOY'S REPORT.

Although yesterday was a very wet and dissgreeable day, J. and I found our way to Rev. Mr. Barnitz' Church. There was a large audience present. The text from which the sermon was preached was in the fourth chapter of Nebemiah, and sixth verse, and was: "So we built the walls, and all the walls were joined together unto the half thereof, for the people had a mind to work."

The story is that when Nehemiah was in the Shushan palace one of the brethren came to see him, and he asked him concerning the Jews who had escaped captivity, and those who remained, and concerning Jersualem, and he told him thisse who were still captives were suffering reproach and that the walls of Jerusalem were forn down, and the gates consumed by fire. Nehemiah told Artaxerxes, the king, about it, and asked him it he might go and help rebuild the walls. The king told him he might go. So Nehemiah went and was appointed their leader. He ordered those who were talented in handing iron to make the iron part of the gates, and so with those who worked in stone and brick. These men did not say, "Mr. Nehemiah, I would rather pound iron than saw wood," nor did they say, "It hink it would be better to stand the stones on their edge than on their side." Mr. Barnitz illustrated this point by standing a book on its edge to represent the stones. These men did not say, it is beat to catch hold of the point of the trowel and use the handle to put on the mortar. They talked no such nonsense, but each man went to work until the work was completed. So ought every man, woman and child to do their own part of Christian work. Nothing can be done without a leader. For instance, in building a railroad one man thinks he know more about it than the chief engineer, but soon finds out that the road is finished only by the direction of the engineer. Again, if an army of the cowardly blood in their veins, go to war without a good General they will probably lose the victory.

Mr. Barnitz closed his remarks by saying that some people were wo
